

Fleming signs new deal with Laurentian University

Fri., July 26, 2019 | timer 1 min. read

update Article was updated May. 11, 2020

Graduates of Fleming College's Environmental Visual Communication (EVC) program now have the option of completing a master's degree at Laurentian University in Sudbury.

The institutions signed an agreement allowing eligible graduates of the EVC program to continue their education in the Master's of Science Communication (M.S.Com) program at Laurentian, states a Fleming press release. "Fleming graduates will receive 21 credits for their EVC certificate and will complete 12 additional credits at Laurentian University to receive their master's, which can be completed in three academic terms. To be eligible, students must have completed an undergraduate degree in addition to the Fleming certificate."

Fleming's EVC program runs in a compressed format, with students based at the Royal Ontario Museum during their first and second semesters. The program is designed to fill a recognized need for individuals who are passionate about environmental issues and storytelling, and who want to effectively engage people to foster change.

Laurentian's Master's of Science Communication program is Canada's only one of its kind, and is delivered in partnership with Science North.